VIETNAM RUBBER & TYRE INDUSTRY

Vietnam's rubber industry maintains its fifth position globally in terms of area, ranking third in natural rubber output worldwide and emerging as the leader in productivity within Asia.

The export turnover of the entire rubber industry in the previous year was estimated at USD 3.31 billion, with an output of 2.14 million tons, reflecting a 2.16% increase compared to 2021. Within this, rubber products accounted for an estimated USD 1.08 billion. During the first quarter of 2023, rubber exports amounted to 381.78 thousand tons, valued at USD 531.3 million.

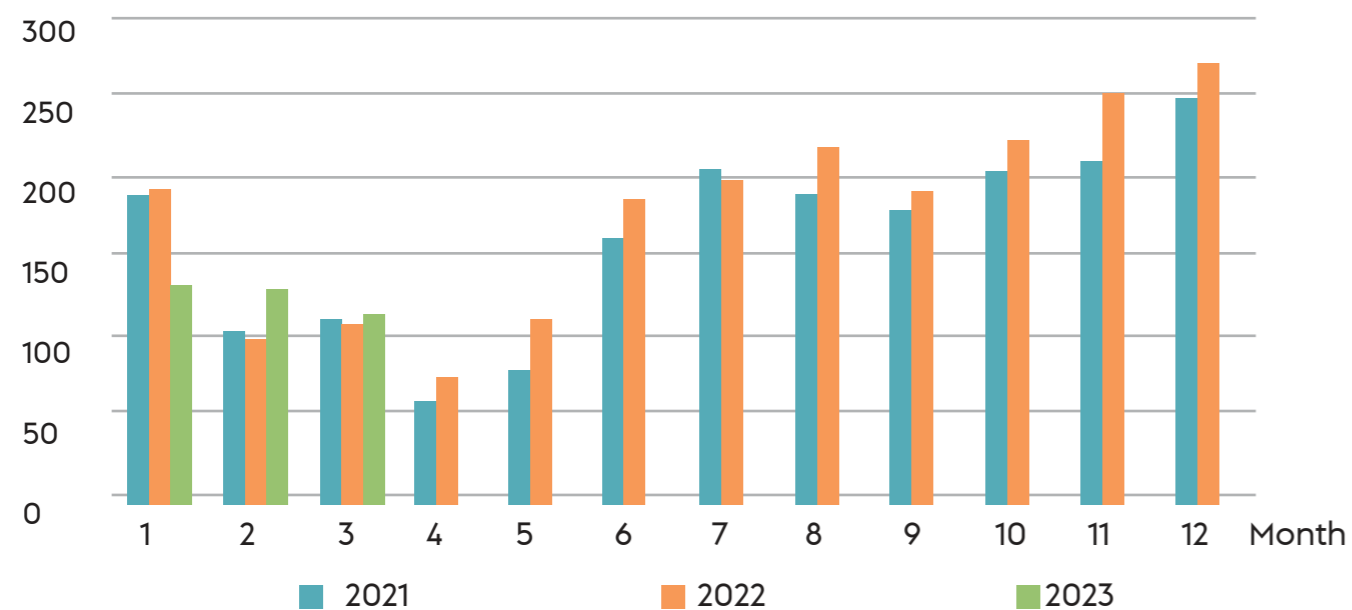

In 2022, China remained the largest importer of Vietnamese rubber, accounting for 79.8% of the total export value. This trend continued into the first quarter of 2023, with the actual figure surpassing 292,600 tons, reflecting a growth rate of over 4% compared to the same period.

India held the position of the second-largest market for rubber exports, with Vietnam's rubber consumption in 2022 reaching 123.2 thousand tons, valued at USD 218 million. This trend represented an 8.8% increase in volume and a 4.5% increase in value compared to 2021, accounting for 6.6% of the country's total rubber export value. Other markets ranking third to fifth include Cambodia (2.9%), South Korea (2.5%), and Turkey (1.9%). High competition with Thailand, Indonesia, and Ivory Coast is observed in Korea and the Netherlands.

Despite facing challenges, Vietnam's rubber industry remains a promising player in the international market. The country benefits from restructuring rubber production from other nations, attracted by lower labour costs, reduced production expenses, and improved product quality.

“ We've been here for the last 3 years, participated in 2013, and before covid I also came here. This year - 2023 i'm finding that the organization is big, more professional manage and a lot of people coming and expecting people come here to see. More product manufacturers coming here and we have more connection with them. We look forward to coming again the next year. Have a best wish to the organizer. We thanks them for the professional organization. ”
